

Where bushes periodically burn, children fear other children: girls whose scornings are flint on dry rock which—don't we know—is all the heart afforded a certain type: untended, magnifying boys.

oh fickle lens! oh smoke and smoldering beetle!
oh thwarted desire in foothills of brush and now flame.

