Angels of four syllables carried your heart;
they left it in the park—
sum of arrival
a tremor
sky reflection in the pond,
water that never arrived.

Now, when children draw the world with chalk and twilight’s bells rain over the people your heart in the shadow consults the syllabaries full of spirit and smoke.