Monkey

The little stuffed monkey wore underpants and somebody named him before she named me. It wasn’t his fault that the monkey came first. My mother cooked roasts and my father carved them with a silver, electric knife plugged into the wall by my chair. Fancy pan. Stucco house. Angry brother with the one-eyed monkey on his well-made bed.