

Company

We're company for each other, my little mouse and I.

He hears the clack of my fork on china, picking up pasta, and keeps on crunching corn chips behind the toaster, until I wonder: if he is mine, whose half-tame mouse am I, so unafraid in this dream of eternal abundance?