

Harvest City

From the consequence of taste a lemon drops and then the streams of bees and in the bees already a hint of silence.

A man
unhinged in seasons learns restraint. The hive contains late winter.
The lemon, grace.

Oh city,
munitions of stillness.
What gushes through
with the window
when it breaks.

