

Delivering to the Client

All afternoon within the cubicles, it has been raining requirements.
Code meanders down screens, a river depositing content to reservoirs of large cities.
The river is muddy. Testers look for unintended consequences: silt, small towns from nowhere sapping resources on the banks, driftwood and beavers filling dams.
Their will is to break everything, but they could miss the isolated farmstead where a man in the rain works on a tractor. Inside him is a boy who insists that tomorrow, when it stops raining, he will go fishing.

